

STRATEGIES OF REMEMBERING IN GREECE UNDER ROME (100 BC - 100 AD)

EDITED BY
TAMARA M. DIJKSTRA, INGER N.I. KUIN,
MURIEL MOSER & DAVID WEIDGENANT

PUBLICATIONS OF THE
NETHERLANDS INSTITUTE AT ATHENS VI

At the beginning of the first century BC Athens was an independent city bound to Rome through a friendship alliance. By the end of the first century AD the city had been incorporated into the Roman province of Achaëa. Along with Athenian independence perished the notion of Greek self-rule. The rest of Achaëa was ruled by the governor of Macedonia already since 146 BC, but the numerous defections of Greek cities during the first century BC show that Roman rule was not yet viewed as inevitable.

In spite of the definitive loss of self-rule this was not a period of decline. Attica and the Peloponnese were special regions because of their legacy as cultural and religious centres of the Mediterranean. Supported by this legacy communities and individuals engaged actively with the increasing presence of Roman rule and its representatives. The archaeological and epigraphic records attest to the continued economic vitality of the region: buildings, statues, and lavish tombs were still being constructed. There is hence need to counterbalance the traditional discourses of weakness on Roman Greece, and to highlight how acts of remembering were employed as resources in this complex political situation.

The legacy of Greece defined Greek and Roman responses to the changing relationship. Both parties looked to the past in shaping their interactions, but how this was done varied widely. Sulla fashioned himself after the tyrant-slayers Harmodius and Aristogeiton, while Athenian ephebes evoked the sea-battles of the Persian Wars to fashion their valour. This interdisciplinary volume traces strategies of remembering in city building, funerary culture, festival and association, honorific practices, Greek literature, and political ideology. The variety of these strategies attests to the vitality of the region. In times of transition the past cannot be ignored: actors use what came before, in diverse and complex ways, in order to build the present.

Tamara M. Dijkstra, Inger N.I. Kuin, Muriel Moser & David Weidgenannt (eds):
Strategies of Remembering in Greece Under Rome (100 BC - 100 AD).

- ISBN: 9789088904806
- Number of pages: ca. 285
- Paperback: € 34.95 (ex. shipping)
- Upon publication, available for FREE online reading
- Also available as hardback, see website
- Sidestone Press / www.sidestone.com
- More information & pre-ordering
- Series: Publications of the Netherlands Institute at Athens vol. VI

Order now for special introductory price of € 29.95

use the form below or order online at www.sidestone.com/books/strategies-of-remembering-in-greece-under-rome-100-bc-100-ad

I hereby order  copie(s) of “Strategies of Remembering in Greece Under Rome” for the introductory price of € 29.95 per copy.* Orders will be shipped upon publication of the book (December 2017)

Name: _____

Address: _____

City: _____ Postalcode: _____

Country: _____

E-mail: _____

keep me informed about new Sidestone Publications

Signature: _____

* Shipping costs are €4.50 per order in the Netherlands, €9.00 for most EU countries and up to max. €12.50 elsewhere. In case shipping fee deviates we will contact you with details prior to shipping.

Send this order form to: Sidestone Press, Fruitweg 46A 2321 DH Leiden (The Netherlands) or mail this form to info@sidestone.nl

STRATEGIES OF REMEMBERING IN GREECE UNDER ROME (100 BC - 100 AD)

EDITED BY
TAMARA M. DIJKSTRA, INGER N.I. KUIN,
MURIEL MOSER & DAVID WEIDGENANNT

PUBLICATIONS OF THE
NETHERLANDS INSTITUTE AT ATHENS VI

CONTENTS

Preface: Relaunching the Publications of the Netherlands Institute at Athens Series

W. van de Put

Introduction

T.M. Dijkstra, I.N.I. Kuin, M. Moser, D. Weidgenannt

Part I: Building Remembrance

1. Roman Greece and the 'Mnemonic Turn': Some Critical Remarks

D. Grigoropoulos, V. Di Napoli, V. Evangelidis, F. Camia, D. Rogers, S. Vlizon

2. Managing Social Roles after Death: The Strategic Use of Tombs in Roman Patras

T.M. Dijkstra

3. Contending with the Past in Roman Corinth

C. de Grazia Vanderpool, P.D. Scotton

Part II: Competing with the Past

4. Heritage Societies? Private Associations in Roman Greece (1st century BC to 2nd century AD)

B. Eckhardt

5. Performing the Past: Salamis, Naval Contests and the Athenian Ephebeia

Z. Newby

6. Greek Panhellenic Agones in a Roman Colony: Corinth and the Return of the Isthmian Games

L. del Basso

Part III: Honoring Tradition

7. Heroes of Their Times. Intra-Mural Burials in the Urban Memorial Landscapes of the Roman Peloponnese

J. Fouquet

8. Public Statues as a Strategy of Remembrance in Roman Messene

C. Dickenson

9. ἀρετῆς ἕνεκεν καὶ εὐνοίας: Commemorating Times of Crisis

D. Weidgenannt

Part IV: History in Athens

10. Political Change in Post-Sullan Athens

I.N.I. Kuin

11. Public Honours for Roman Friends: The Past as a Political Resource on the Roman Acropolis

M. Moser

12. The Past in the Present: Athenian Inscriptional Language Regarding the Divine, the Roman Challenge and the Construction of Urban Mnemonics

E. Fassa

Conclusion: Change and Remembering in Roman Greece

I.N.I. Kuin, M. Moser

